Social Spaces

Socially Connected More Than Ever

When given the choice, people are drawn to the places that make them feel comfortable and productive. What we previously knew as the “office” has been evolving into a place of social context—more collaborative than ever. After all, interaction with colleagues makes us happier and more engaged at work. These restorative activities are just as critical to the creative process as high-focus work—and significant for innovation to occur.

As a global company, Haworth delivers the best in design and performance to clients wherever they are in the world. We are uniquely positioned to ensure we meet client preferences and needs based on local cultures, standards, and norms. Design thinking permeates everything we do—from products to spaces. We partner with leading designers to bring clients the best possible solutions for social spaces. Whether the focus is traditional or forward-thinking, artisans employ time-tested methods, materials, and new technologies to bring design details to life.

Work from Anywhere

Why do people value being in the workplace? To collaborate, create, and innovate. To connect socially. To leverage the teams, networks, and processes that help them perform their best. To be inspired. Its purpose has shifted from where we had to work to a place that's more dynamic and experiential than ever.

The workplace is going through an evolution and ultimately will change work for the better. Before, many employees had assigned workstations. Now, not every job function may require daily presence in the office. The space will be optimized for activities that foster collaboration and creativity to drive innovation.

The office is also where organizations establish and cultivate their unique culture, based on a foundation of values and influenced by brand. Culture is embedded in the physical workplace and manifested by the people who work there. Across generations, we are social creatures who need human connection to thrive. The office environment nurtures the human element of our work lives through all five of our senses, which virtual experiences can't replace.

Work from Anywhere is the ecosystem that gives organizations and employees choice in where and when work happens. This autonomy also serves as an attraction/retention strategy for talent, offering improved work/life balance through flexible work schedules. The Work from Anywhere ecosystem supports organizational culture and employee well-being so people can work fluidly—from the office hub, home, and third places.

The key is finding the right balance to support people’s needs for well-being and interaction. Social Spaces products accommodate a variety of work-from-home applications. Visit store.haworth.com to learn more.

From micro spaces and shared offices to dedicated rooms, Social Spaces products provide a variety of solutions for home. Find designs that accommodate your functional and aesthetic needs, while offering price flexibility for your budget.

Giulio Cappellini:

Classic Trendsetter

Animated by an indomitable spirit and the curiosity of someone who wants to renew himself continuously, Giulio Cappellini dedicates himself to design by offering his personal revision of contemporary design, both for the brand that bears his name, and as art director for other important brands in the field.

“There is always something new and exciting to discover, and new people and things to know.”

Giulio Cappellini

Through his most ambitious project, his company, Cappellini has become a bona fide trendsetter in the world of design and universally recognized talent scout for young professionals. Cappellini brings his passion for art and design to feature eclectic products that engage emotions.

Cappellini the man always dresses in a classic way—and he likes his accessories. You’ll never see him without a pochette in his jacket pocket. He drinks black tea with milk for breakfast and has an espresso to finish. He loves to travel. Dinner is the most important meal because it is the most relaxing.

When he works, Cappellini sits in an office chair at a white desk surrounded by books and travel souvenirs. And he writes by hand. “To draw is very important and also when you start to do prototypes,” says Cappellini. “Technology applies a lot today but we shouldn’t lose the idea of using our hands and touching the products.”

Cappellini believes the real goal of design is “to create a very nice atmosphere with less import.” In this new era of design, he says, “We can work in our home, we can work in the park, we can work in a restaurant, we can work everywhere.”

Design for Social Change

Designers have long known the power of rugs to transform a space, infusing it with warmth, beauty, color, and definition. Rugs also bring economic development, empowerment, and stability to a region of the world.

The Bandas Space collection by GAN was born in conjunction with a social cause: The Rural Women Development Project. GAN creative director Mapi Millet began to envision the concept during one of her many visits to India, where all GAN rugs are handcrafted.

“When you get so much from a country, and it’s a place like India that needs so much, you start thinking about what you can do to give back,” says Mapi. “More than 80 percent of the people working for GAN are women, so it made sense to focus on women—particularly women in India, who lack financial stability and decision-making power. The way to best help these women is to give them continuous work and pay they can count on.”

Handmade has been a focus of the GAN brand from the beginning. The best carpets that last have always been made by hand, for centuries. This approach ensures the artisans' knowledge is retained and shared during the process.

Rugs give a space warmth and a unique look. Each carpet is never exactly the same as another because it was not made by the same hand, or the same eye, or even mood.

Mapi shared her vision with Patricia Urquiola, who was eager to collaborate on the project. They came up with the idea to make a line of embroidered rugs to take advantage of a skillset that almost all women in the region have. Embroidery work is also portable, so the women can take it home and work on it there if needed—they are often caring for children or older relatives, so they can continue doing their paying job at home.

Consulting with the women, Mapi learned that 60 centimeters wide was the maximum size they could work with. Rather than see the size restriction as an obstacle, Mapi and Patricia saw the creative possibilities. The idea of Bandas—bands of carpet—was formed. Crafted of pure wool, the rugs are embellished with the unlimited color, texture, and design possibilities that embroidery allows.

“As we’ve explained the project to other designers, they’ve been inspired to create designs for Bandas,” Mapi says. “The relationship is like a beautiful triangle among the designers, the artisans in India, and GAN.”

Structure, Redefined

A collaboration between Haworth and Gensler New York, Resonate is a collection of contemporary, modular lounge furnishings and chairs that support the in-between times when ideas form. Based on a uniform platform structure, each modular lounge, ottoman, lounge chair, side chair, and table plays a complementary role in creating and defining a group lounge area—or neighborhood—adjacent to the work area.

“We wanted Resonate to complement today’s contemporary work environments. It is warm, casual, and tailored. It uses informed research to deliver a scale and comfort that supports the user to do their best work.”

Resonate helps people claim control of daily activities—offering destinations for connection while also meeting physical, cognitive, and emotional needs to support well-being at work. Its warm aesthetic and visual lightness harmoniously relate to today’s interior landscape.

The simple statement of line contains seven elements, each built from a perfect square wire base. The one-dimensional footprint offers easy connecting and versatile space planning. Variety of scale, materiality, color, and a curated palette of finishes enable unique combinations that bring workspaces to life.

Change your pace or change your scenery—Resonate lets you recharge, refocus, or regroup in comfortable seating that accommodates nearly every body.

“Resonate will be a great advantage for reconfiguring and activating spaces. There are a lot of different components for designers to use to shape the space.”

Carlos Martinez
 Principal, Gensler New York

Kvadrat:

Pure Expression in Textile Design

In 2018, Haworth launched a partnership in North America with Kvadrat—one of the world’s most revered and renowned textile houses. As two family-owned, design led, global companies, our relationship is a natural fit, rooted in values—like design and sustainability—that form our collective DNA. Together we offer high-quality, high-performance products in a consistent palette that meet the needs of clients around the world.

“Each color needs to be very strong and live on its own. But the energy inside the total range of color is also extremely important. Working with color is like working with humans—you need to make them feel comfortable. So a strong yellow may need a pale yellow friend or a dusty purple uncle to feel comfortable in the color range.”

Stine Find Ooster
VP of Design, Kvadrat

Kvadrat has been a pioneer in the industry— pushing the aesthetic, artistic, and technological boundaries of textile design. They work with some of the world’s leading designers and emerging talent.

“We never design alone,” says Stine Find Oster, VP of Design at Kvadrat. “We strongly believe in collaboration and that innovation can happen in a dialogue between different people. Our external designers come from extremely different backgrounds—from textile geeks who know how to handle the loom to others who don’t know anything about textiles. This diversity is extremely important for us to help push the boundaries for what is possible.”

Kvadrat has set the standard, not just for aesthetics, but also performance—bringing the best possible products to the market, with the smallest footprint, without compromising aesthetic.

“You have to put down new milestones on both creativity and technology,” says Anders Byriel, CEO at Kvadrat. “While we need to be inspiring and exploring, we also need to deliver the best high-performing product—it just needs to be better than anything out there.”
